

Candidate Dress for Success - Check List for Women

- Looking for professional best for the interviews does not happen by itself. You need to plan for it, you need to budget for it and you need to shop for it.
- If what you intend to wear has been in your wardrobe for more than 3 years, ask yourself: "Does it make me feel like a million dollars?"
- Research, research, research. What do the role models in the company and /or industry tend to wear? Dress not for now but for the position you want to have in 5 years.

Women who wear make-up

Earn 23% more than those that don't, according to research. Lipstick is essential

Sweat marks, body odour, bad breathe, crushed clothing, poor hygiene speak louder than your resume. Don't give them a chance

Accessories are important in finishing off the look. Remember though anything that dangles, moves or distracts attention in any other way is inappropriate. Less is more.

Bad shoes and you don't stand a chance. It's amazing what a clean and polish can do to an old pair of shoes.

Tattoos should be covered where and when ever possible. The can sometimes give the wrong impression.

If your hair is not right, you won't look your best regardless of how hard you try. Find the style that works for you.

The more skin you show, the cheaper your look. Beware of plunging necklines, open toe shoes, bare shoulders and exposed midriiffs.

You can tell a professional by her hands. Visit a manicure salon or do your own. The devil is the detail.

A warm and honest smile completes any outfit.
